For Frying-For Shortening
---For Cake Making

Frying

There is no smoke nor odor. Fried foods are free from the taste of grease. They now are tasty and crisp. They are made more digestible, for Crisco is all vegetable.
The same Crisco can be used to fry fish, onions, doughnuts, etc., merely by straining out the food particles after each frying.

Shortening

Crisco gives pastry a new flakiness and digestibility.
Crisco always is of the same freshness and consistency.
It's uniform quality makes for uniform results.

Cake Making

Crisco gives richness at smaller cost. It brings cake-making back to popularity. Butter bills are reduced and cakes stay fresh and moist longer.

ObituariesMRS. SUSAN C. BERTELMAN

Mrs. Susan C. Bertelman died at her home, 1513 Leilani street, Kalihi, Honolulu, at twenty-five minutes after four o'clock Thursday afternoon, following a short illness.

Mrs. Bertelman who was the widow of Christian H. Bertelman, was born in Kauai seventy-four years ago. She was a daughter of Charles Titcomb, known in Hawaiian history as the man who introduced the mulberry tree into the Islands and who raised the first silk worms, his "silk" plantation being established at Hanalei, Kauai. Titcomb threw up the industry when the Hawaiian authorities passed one of the famous blue laws, he claimed, to injure his business.

This particular blue law prohibited the picking of the leaves of the mulberry trees on Sundays.
Since the silk worms had to be fed on entirely fresh leaves, Sunday was a day of starvation for them.

Titcomb was also the first jeweler brought to the Islands, coming here at the request of Kamehameha IV, who wanted special royal jewelry designed on the ground under his personal observation.

Eight children mourn the death of their mother, three others being dead. The children living are Mrs.
Charles H. Baker, Mrs. Joseph K.
Cockett, Mrs. Angeline Hogan, Mrs. Beatrice Ross, Mrs. Hattie Bannister, Frank, Henry and Christian S. Bertelman. Three sisters and two brothers survive the deceased. These are Mrs.
James H. Fiddes of Kaimuki, Mrs.
Weber, wife of Manager F. Weber of the Lihue Plantation Company, Kauai; and Mrs. August Dreier (widow), George and Jules Titcomb.

Can We Save on Dress?

Do we give more time, I wonder, to the matter of dress that we really need to?

That is, I mean, those of us who consider ourselves sensible in this matter.

Some there are we know who spend most of their time and money on dress. They give it far more attention than it requires, or is worth. But most of us only give it such time and thought as we believe is must have. But I wonder are we mistaken in this and could we get just as satisfactory results with far less expenditure of thought and time. If we could, wouldn't it be an end to be desired?

My attention was called to the matter by an experience related to me by a friend. She is a woman of average means, with a pleasant social circle who dresses prettily and in good taste, but does not go in for the extremes of fashion nor the more costly apparel. One would say she is sensible in the matters of clothes, but this does not mean she is freakishly plain or out of fashion. She gives a fair amount of time and thought to dress, but the subject does not absorb her.

The other day in discussing her outfit she said: "I have discovered that I have been giving a lot more time to what dresses to get and how to have them made and to shoes and hats and such things than is at all necessary. When I look back on the hours and days I have wasted, I am appalled."

"But," I protested, "I should never say you wasted time on clothes."

"I never thought I did either. But the last two years have taught me a lesson. For many and various reasons, I haven't bought the clothes these past two years that I usually do. I haven't had nearly so many gowns or hats or shoes as customary. And I can't see but that I have been just as well dressed, just as acceptable to my friends as I've always been."

"I haven't noticed any difference," I admitted.

"I didn't notice any difference myself until I began to think about it," she laughed. "I've had clothes enough. I know I looked well enough when I went out. It wasn't until I began getting my summer outfit that I realized how little I had really bought in the past two years. And then it came home to me that I have been putting lots of time and money into clothes that I didn't need to. From henceforth, the clothes proposition is going to be considerably lightened. I shall cut out about half the botheration it used to be and so far as looks go, nobody will know it."

And so I am wondering if lots of us aren't putting more time and money into the "clothes proposition," as she called it, than we need to. Suppose we cut out some of the gowns and hats and shoes and neckwear and etceteras we usually buy. Will we be any the less acceptable socially?

Lets think about it! We may find we may lighten one of the burdens that weighs on us rather heavily and perhaps help others to lighten theirs. For in the matter of fashion, we are somewhat like sheep. We follow a leader. And no matter how strenuous the pace, we breathlessly keep up, thinking there is nothing else for us to do.
But if we discover there is another way, that we are none the worse off socially or sartorially for slackening our pace, and much better off in other ways, isn't it worth while to know this fact?
